

The Plight of Man

Now
what?

A VIEW OF THE HUMAN STRUGGLE

For all those who sense there is something wrong behind the scenes ... but don't know what it is, we hope this little paper of snippets will shed some light.

The Issues of life... Can you relate to any of these?

*I*f we human beings can scan the vastness of space and probe the depths of the ocean, why are we at such a loss to have a deep conversation with the person sitting right next to us?

*H*ours and hours are spent fashioning our own personal web pages where we can craft our own electronic identity. We can add or delete a "friend" at the click of a button.

*A*nd what about our relationships? Are they only based on what we are getting out of them in the moment? Do we not value commitment anymore? Is it too old-fashioned, or just more than we're willing to give?

*J*s this all Life is,
an everlasting hunger, an eternal feeling of want?

Is it forever empty?

If I stop hoping,
maybe I will stop
being disappointed.

Then maybe I will be content to just let this void go ahead and gnaw.

*T*here's this empty
feeling inside of me.
Ugh, that void again.

There doesn't seem to be anything that can fill IT. No drug, no food, no drink, no fantasy love story or aspiration for the future can satisfy the hunger inside me. "Once I get my paycheck..." "After I finish college..."
"another relationship..." "another drink..."

Then... THEN it will stop.
THEN this annoying void
will quit sucking
my life away.

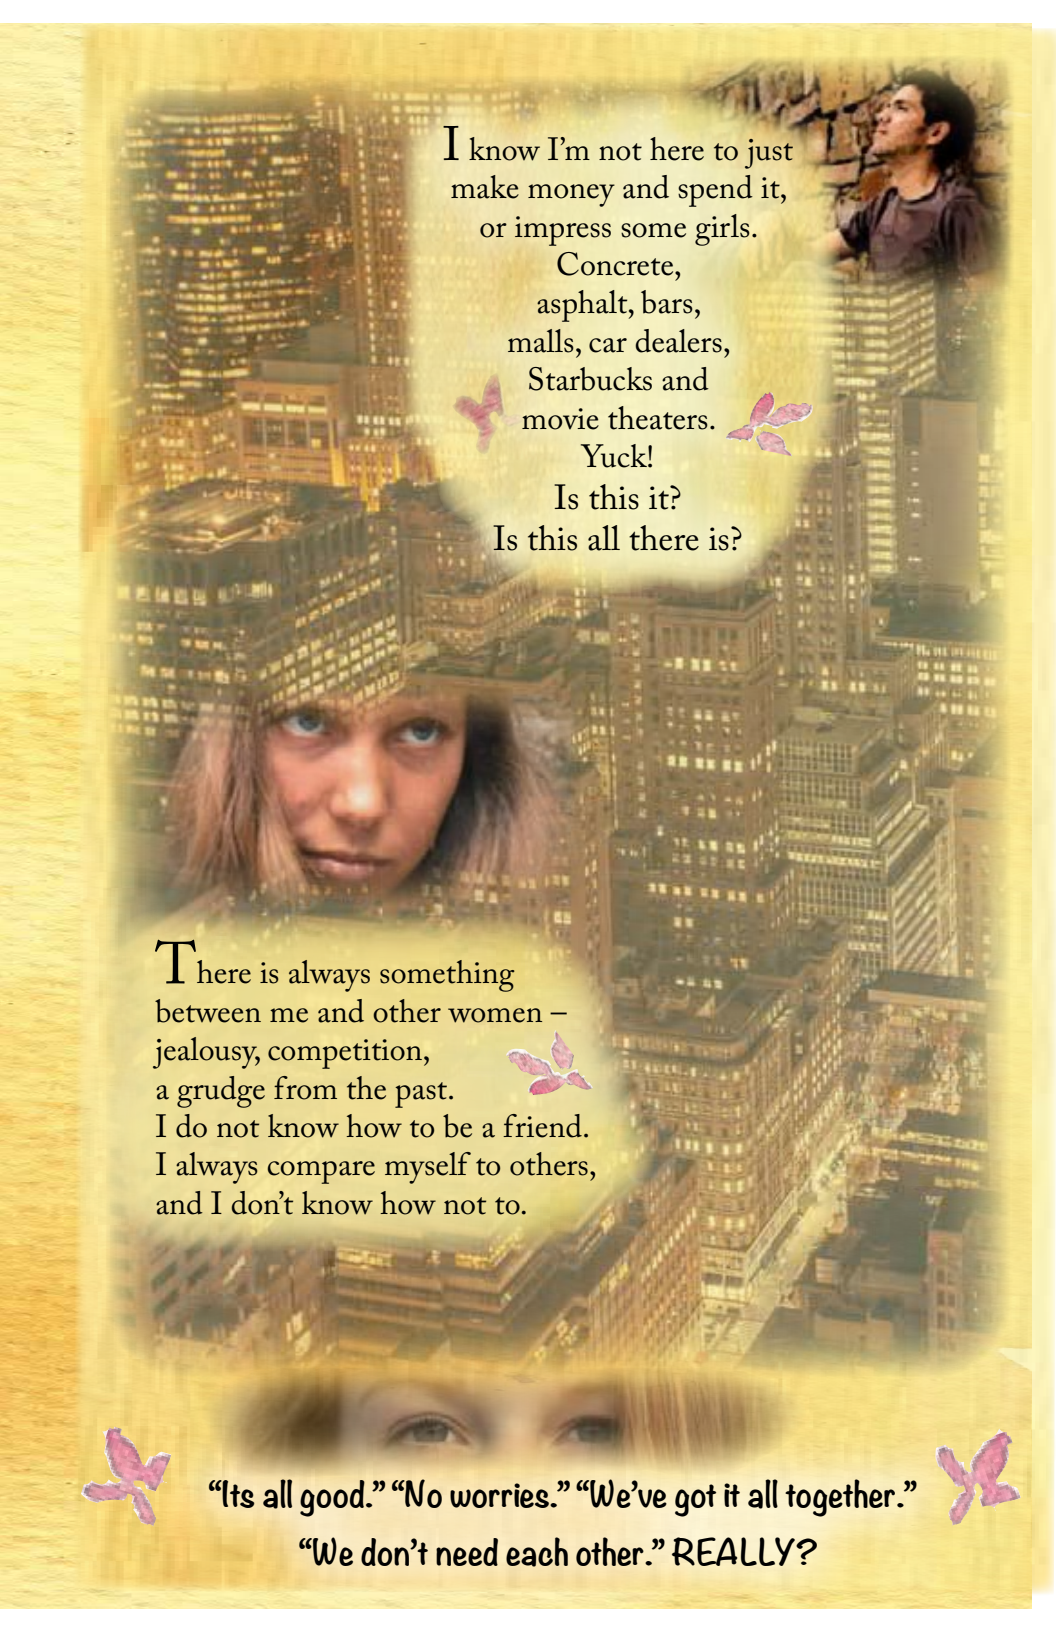

Seems impossible to get along with one another. Why does it have to be this way? Surely it's not everyone else's fault. Is there something in me that alienates me from others? Where do all these maladies that plague our souls come from anyway? We're so scarred by the things we've been through. A great injustice rules this planet, for there is an evil mastermind who is destroying and ravaging lives in every dark corner of society and as a result, we each suffer from our own various maladies and weaknesses, like greed, selfishness, uncontrolled anger, jealousy, to name a few, and wonder how we got into this condition. But just take a look at where we came from and how we were raised. No one needs to teach a tiny baby to scream in anger when he does not get his way.

In that little baby we can already see something about the innate nature of humans. We learned from our parents, schools, friends, and society to love money and independence. We were allowed to do our own thing and to disregard anything or anybody that didn't go along with what we wanted. We grew up being disrespectful and disobedient, striving to be the best, and envying those who got more than us. Deceit was a valuable tool to manipulate others and to get the upper hand.

We quickly learned to pursue our own pleasure ignoring the hurt we caused others. Maybe we brought a lot of this pain upon ourselves. How can we cope with such pain? What could we have done differently? No one ever told us that the self-seeking lives we were living were what was bringing such destruction upon us.

I know I'm not here to just make money and spend it,
or impress some girls.

Concrete,
asphalt, bars,
malls, car dealers,
Starbucks and movie theaters.

Yuck!

Is this it?

Is this all there is?

There is always something between me and other women –
jealousy, competition,
a grudge from the past.
I do not know how to be a friend.
I always compare myself to others,
and I don't know how not to.

"It's all good." "No worries." "We've got it all together."
"We don't need each other." REALLY?

Our whole society is based on Self.

Your self wants more than it needs.

It's easy to accuse the government and big corporations, to complain about war, pollution, and everything else that's going on in the world. But what's hard is to face the fact that you are the same way. You are selfish.

The advertising industry has convinced Americans that, contrary to ancient wisdom, you can buy happiness. And people are gobbling it up as fast as they can get their hands on it.

I just need to follow my heart, and right now I'm realizing that my heart isn't in my life. I'm just a shell, just a series of identities I've taken on and thrown away. Who am I? What am I here for?

What you believe, is what you DO when you get up in the morning. And what you do all day long. That's what you believe. What you believe is what you do.

There must be something beyond forcing ourselves through school to work jobs we hate in order to make enough money to pay for day care to raise our children while we're out working, only to end up retired and medicated in an RV in Florida somewhere wondering, "Why are we even alive?" Will anything ever fill this insatiable void?

Imagine

Just imagine a world where everyone is conditioned to love shopping, travel, entertainment, sex, and sports and all social life revolves around these pursuits. This would take the place of deep relationships, so no one would ever feel rejected or hurt.

Books with deep meaning or truth would be banned, but no one would be able to understand them anyway, because no one would have the capacity to think deeply anymore.

And because everything would be so shallow and superficial, there would be nothing controversial anymore. No one would have the time or even the desire to think about anything unpleasant.

A person's whole existence would consist of gratifying his senses. There would be no wars because no one would feel strongly about anything except pleasure, of which there would be no shortage.

And if anyone would ever have a sad thought or a bad feeling, there would be a wonder drug that would fix it lickety split. It would be distributed liberally and perpetually to people of all classes, and no one could be unhappy when on it.

It would be the perfect, one-dimensional society... the solution to the plight of man. Or would it? If you're not convinced that it would be... read on!

Reality is:

Mindless entertainment and abundance of playtime has produced the most self-centered and spoiled children that history has ever seen. Their over-stimulated and materialistic lifestyles are failing to satisfy their profound need for deep, loving relationships. Children under five are the fastest growing group being prescribed antidepressants.

The "cure" offered does not bring healing
to the root of the problem, but just a dulling of the pain and controlling of the unwanted behavior.

Modern psychology tells people what they want to hear: "It's not your fault. You're just sick, and modern medicine has the cure."

Schools today have banned any mention of accountability, undermining man's instinctive knowledge of the truth. What once was called a nagging conscience is now called mental illness. There is no longer an authoritative voice to call people to take accountability for their actions.

Teenagers have become their own segment of society, a subculture left to find their own way in life.

We were told that we needed an education so that we wouldn't "have to dig ditches for a living," and that the only purpose of work was to make lots of money so that we could have material comfort and gratifying leisure time.

We live to feel good: music, selfies,
Facebook, TV, movies, sports, video games, girls, boys, parties,
food, drink and me, me, ME!

*T*hese are supposed paths to happiness and self-fulfillment. Our concept of love is:
“You make me happy.”

How often do we consider the direction of our lives? When the herd moves, do we follow blindly along, trusting in the safety of numbers? Maybe what we do doesn't even seem reasonable, but everyone's doing it, so we go along, rather than risk being left out.

Being left out is such a terrible feeling. To what lengths will we go to avoid it? It is like a hot knife cutting into our innermost being, exposing the fearful reality of a lonely life.

— Take sexuality, for instance.

At one time in our society sexual intimacy was reserved for those committed to one another in marriage.

— That restraint was cast off in “pursuit of happiness.” Sex has become a casual pastime.

Morality seems like a plot to repress our desires that we so rightly deserve to gratify.

— All we need to do is dive into our passions and desires and just enjoy the ride. We’re free agents. As long as we don’t hurt others we can set our own standards of right and wrong.

THE GREAT DISCONNECT

Their relationship had been so wonderful in the beginning.

He had never felt so happy in his entire life.

They did everything together.

They talked about music and movies and places they'd like to see. As time passed he felt himself falling more and more deeply in love with her. He tried to talk to her about the things he felt in his heart, even though it made him feel weak and vulnerable.

He could hardly form the words.

His cool exterior began to crack.

At his openness, she withdrew and grew quiet.

There was an awkward silence. He said something funny and fake. She laughed. He tried to get over the rejection he felt, but he was torn up inside. He took long walks and quietly suffered with depression for weeks. Though he tried to hide it, she began to notice. It weighed her down. He didn't make her happy anymore. She told him that she didn't want to see him anymore.

The landscape of modern society is littered with failed relationships such as this.

So I guess we don't really hurt the millions who give up their virginity and self-esteem for cheap sex, or the unwanted babies who will grow up frustrated and unhappy, or the aborted babies who will never get the chance – they didn't really suffer, did they?

It wouldn't be fair, would it, to include the emotional pain suffered when a person realizes that they had only been used when they were really seeking love? That wasn't our responsibility. That's their problem.

We're too busy finding ourselves to be concerned with the casualties we've left along the way.

It is an evil system, bent on the destruction of man, that allows him to think he can escape the consequences of his actions. The great lie of this age is that you won't be judged for your deeds. Deep down we all know this, but we reason it away.

Your Destiny

Destiny is like destination. It is the place where you arrive at the end of a journey. When you walk towards a specific destination, each step you take brings you closer to where you are going. The further you go, the more set you are in that direction. It becomes harder to turn around.

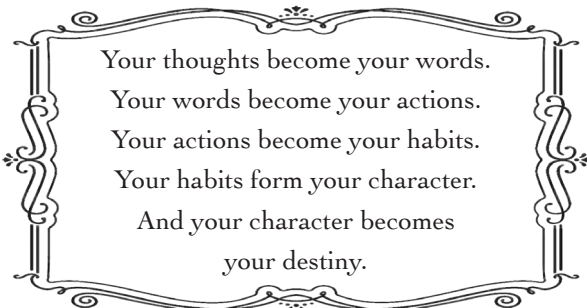

In the same way, in life you are “walking” towards your own eternal destination. How you live your life now determines where you will end up.

Every person will go to one of three eternal destinies. God does not decide this for you, as though it were a matter of fate. No! You choose your own eternal destiny by the moral standards you live by, whether good or evil. Your actions reflect the choices you make in life. Those outward deeds indicate which path you are on. If you continue to walk in that same direction long enough, you will eventually reach your eternal destination.

You have a conscience which tells you instinctively what is right and what is wrong. The deeds you do, the words you speak, even the thoughts you think — for these you will be called to account. Destiny has accountability attached to it. That is why every man is without excuse for what he does. Your eternal destiny is set in direct relation to how you consistently obey or disobey your conscience.

It is so wonderful that your Creator has given you the freedom to choose your own eternal destiny. There is a difference between fate and destiny. It is mankind’s fate to die once. Fate, like death, is unavoidable. It is an appointment which every person will keep.

You can’t change your fate, but you can change your destiny. It is all according to your ability to hear and respond to the truth.

Have you ever known anyone who was just plain REAL?

That's the word you would use to describe him. He wasn't playing a game. He wasn't projecting some image, trying to get people to look up to him. There wasn't a speck of deceit in him. He didn't have anything up his sleeve. He was exactly what he appeared to be. He said exactly what he meant. And that's why people loved him.

Or hated him.

Some people promise you the moon, but he wasn't like that. There was substance to what he said. He talked about real things such as greed, and fear, and selfishness – things that are inside everybody, things that phonies don't want to admit, and cowards don't want to face up to. But he wasn't gloomy and depressing. He was full of joy and full of hope. He knew a way out. That's why he talked about those real problems – because he knew that those things were taking people to death, and he didn't want them to go to death. He wanted them to be full of life – life that would never end. He talked about love – real love – not some word you hear in a song that makes you feel good until the song ends, and not some plastic religious pretense. The love he talked about was the love he lived – love that costs you something.

Love that costs you your life. That's why he didn't just give people the same old song and take off, leaving them in the dust.

His life wasn't his own. He got right down there in the dust with them and healed their hurts, and helped them through their hard times, and dealt with the stuff inside them that was taking them to death.

And he didn't just help people out for a while and then go home, either. He didn't have a home of his own. The only home he had was the people that he loved. They were his everything. He loved them so much that he wanted them to be with him. He called them to follow him, to leave behind homes and families and possessions and, of course, self, and embark with him on a radical life of loving the same way he loved. It was a high calling. Just think about it: actually caring for others at the expense of your own interests. Who could live such a life? Many have tried and failed. But to those who are needy and desperate, and trust in him, he gives the power to do what would naturally be impossible.

We follow this man Yahshua. How could we do anything else? He proved his love for us by taking our place in death. We never knew love like that before – a love that is stronger than death. He is the one whom death could not hold. He made a way for us to find TRUE FORGIVENESS and the purpose we were created for.

Who Is Yahshua?

He's the most loving person to ever walk the earth, the greatest friend that ever lived. The little children in his day instinctively knew that he was the kindest, and the best. Most people today would call Him Jesus Christ, but we know him by his Hebrew name, Yahshua, which means "God is powerful to save." That was always his name from birth. What sort of people did he come to help? The ones who know that there has to be more to this life than anything the world has to offer, people who long for a second chance to start all over, to have a fresh new start, a new beginning, a purpose, and the power to love.

We heard about Yahshua, and that he loved us, from a people who were actually living together and loving one another. That really affected us. Some of us gave up everything we had and moved right in. Some of us took years to even come around.

But one thing we all had in common, whether we knew what to call it or not, was that we were longing for forgiveness. We wanted peace with "God," whoever that was.

We wanted to know the purpose for our lives, what we were created for. We were actually starving to know what the Author of life had in mind for us. We needed someone who knew, someone we could follow. These things all seem so clear to us now, but at that time we had no idea what was "wrong" with us. And really, neither did anyone else.

We have no idea who gets these papers when we hand them out, but as a people we always pray to our God that each paper would get into the hands of those who have the same heart as ours. We are a very faulty people, but we hope to be those who are loyal to the One who gave up everything he had because he saw our need. Our need was love. And if one word could explain what Yahshua is all about, it would be just that... love. We hope you will hang on to this paper and someday cherish what it says.

The End of Selfishness

Selfishness — concerned excessively or exclusively with oneself: seeking or concentrating on one's own advantage, pleasure, or well-being, without regard for others.

"It's just human nature," one may say, "There's nothing you can do to change it. It's just the way we are." There are so many ways we are "self"-ish!

Self-centeredness, self-consciousness, self-importance, self-indulgence, self-interest, self-pity, self-satisfaction, self-seeking, self-serving, self-willed, self-glory...

Can we understand the many aspects of selfishness and how they affect us? Can we sense the power of their grip? Can we be rescued from all these selfish forces?

Selfishness can be defined in just two words: self concern. You're concerned mostly with yourself — the opposite of considering others more than yourself. Selfishness is at the root of all war and injustice. What would you give to see war and injustice actually come to an end?

Selfishness is actually what the word "sin" means. All these sins of self keep us captive in their powerful grip. From such a grip, how can we be set free? It's simple, really: If I live for you, and you live for me, then all our needs can be met, and we won't have to live or even worry about ourselves anymore. This is the way to true freedom — freedom from our slavery to selfishness.

*W*hat if everyone in the whole world did this? What if everyone just stopped thinking about and living for themselves, and noticed and cared for those around them? What would the world look like if everyone did that, because they really wanted to?

It would be a brand new culture, a radical new society unlike anything else in this world. It would surely be an amazing phenomenon, a stark contrast, a marvelous light in the midst of deep darkness. Is such a life possible? Well, if you look around, it may seem like an impossible “pie in the sky” dream, but if you really believe... it is really possible. But what does it mean to believe? What you believe, is really what you do. So what must we believe, or do, to make this idealistic hope and dream of putting an end to all selfishness actually come true? It will take something radical.

Some Radical Thoughts...

Here are some radical thoughts, some esoteric wisdom from a scroll written long ago. These thoughts lie hidden, even today, within the pages of the world's most popular book, waiting to come to life again, to be a living witness to the world. “There shall be no poor among you.” Deuteronomy 15:4

“Let nothing be done through selfish ambition or conceit, but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than himself. Let each of you look out not for his own interests, but for the interests of others.” Philippians 2:3

What would this look like? Where is this place? There's a window into the past, a picture that's been recorded long ago.

A Radical Life, Some Radical People...

“Now all who believed were together and had all things in common. They sold their possessions and goods, and divided them among all, as anyone had need... Nor was there anyone among them who lacked; for all who were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the proceeds of the things that were sold... and they distributed to each as anyone had need.” Acts 2 and 4

Two thousand years ago, these words and actions were a living demonstration and witness on the earth... and they are coming to be again! Can you believe it — a place where selfishness doesn't reign anymore? Probably not. All who believed, did it back then. But today, can that life be found? The churches and synagogues don't have it. The Communists and hippies couldn't do it; the Hindus and Buddhists strive for selflessness and nirvana — alone. So, where can the existence of true love and the absence of selfishness be found? There is such a place!

We write this to you who believe (or truly want to believe) in love. In case you didn't know, Love is God and God is Love. All those who come to believe in Him will love. It's through love that selfishness can be dealt with in our lives, because God is not selfish. Selfishness comes from somewhere else. The god of selfishness seems to be ruling this world. The whole world lies under its sway. So many people have asked, "Where is God?" You could ask the same question in this way, to help you in your search: "Where is love?"

Love is found in Yahshua.

Yahshua is a Hebrew name. It is the real, true name of the Son of God. That was what people called Him when He walked the earth. He is love — the Son of Love. He is a man in whom the fullness of love dwelt. If you saw Him, you saw love. He showed what God is like.

Here are radical some commands that He gave: "A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another; as I have loved you, that you also love one another. By this all will know that you are My disciples, if you have love for one another." "He who loves his life will lose it, and he who hates his life in this world will keep it for eternal life." "This is My commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you." "And you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind and with all your strength. This is the first commandment; and the second is like it: You shall love your neighbor as yourself.”

*T*his radical man said these radical things, and then His radical disciples did it ... for a time. These radical people who carried out these radical commands, from the heart, gave a window into the ever-expanding universe of love without end. It is called the Kingdom of God. Once we allow love to tear down the walls of our prison of selfishness, then we can be set free, and we never have to think about ourselves again! This is the Good News.

*R*eligion and politics lead down the same road: “I, me, mine.” True belief produces love, which ends our selfish existence on this planet. If you are a Christian wanting to be set free from your SELF, or a mystical seeker trying to transcend your SELF, or an atheist who gave up believing in Love (God), then please come and visit us. There is a life of hope dawning again on the earth, a light to the world. We believe the words of Yahshua, the Son of Love, and we are learning to do what He commanded. He showed us the way to live a life of love in the midst of this crazy, selfish world.

We live together in communities where we share all things in common, as all believers should do. We work together, eat together, sing and dance together; we share our hearts and lives with one another. We are real people who face the real selfishness in our hearts, and put it away so that we can love. This is from God. This is salvation — dealing with self. If you have a heart to live for Him and for your friends all the time, come and see us. There are a few places on the earth where love reigns! As we have said for years, “Come for a day or come to stay.”

*I*f ever you wonder whether such a wonderful way of living could exist, a life with such a great purpose, with friends who just want to love one another, then please come and visit us! There is a place to belong, and a purpose for you to live your life — here with us. We have found the place where Love lives! You can live here, too! So, as you travel down life’s road, if you ever find yourself wondering, “What now?” or “Is there more to life?” then please come and visit us! Get to know us and the great hope and life we have found. You are always welcome! Please come!

We All Live Together

... like an extended family, sharing all things in common, just as the first believers did. They were of one heart and soul, and there was not a needy person among them, for they gave up all their possessions to meet the needs of their brothers and sisters. We've been living this way for almost 50 years.

You can come and see for yourself at any of our addresses, printed in the back of this paper, and on our web site: www.twelvetribes.org.

A woman with long blonde hair, wearing a dark jacket, is smiling and holding a small white dog in her arms. They are in a barn-like setting with wooden beams and a doorway in the background.

In each of our communities, there are one or more houses, some in cities and some on farms. Several families and single people live together in each house. We like large houses because we like to live together. Married couples have their own rooms, plus as many adjacent rooms as needed for their children.

A woman in a brown jacket is pushing a wheelbarrow filled with red tomatoes. Two children are walking alongside her on a grassy path. The background shows trees and a fence.

The single men share one or more rooms, as do the single women.

A group of people, including men and women, are wearing winter jackets and hats. They are gathered around a large log or rope, appearing to be pulling on it together. The background shows trees and a body of water.

We cook and eat and clean up after — together. We gather together every morning and evening to worship our Creator in song and dance, with musical instruments that we are learning to build and play. We are all free to speak from our hearts the things we are learning through one another in our daily life. We pray together for the pressing needs of our people, and for our Father's will to be done on earth.

We have breakfast together and then go to work together in our own Yellow Delis, farms, cottage industries, and trades. All income goes into a common purse from which all of our needs are met. We don't have our own independent income or debts to carry by ourselves, except for the debt of love we owe to our Creator, which we repay by loving and caring for one another.

We love and cherish our children. We teach them at home, using a curriculum we are developing ourselves, to give them the basic skills they need to read, write, and speak effectively, to live together in peace and to fulfill their created purpose.

Our children's training goes far beyond the classroom, however, as they are fully integrated into every aspect of our rich tribal life. They learn to cook and sew, build and farm, care for animals, sing and dance, play musical instruments, and most importantly, extend hospitality to the constant flow of guests who are drawn to the light of our life of love.

Together we are experiencing and demonstrating the restoration of all things spoken of by the prophets of old, and by our Master Yahshua, whose life, death, and resurrection make this life possible.

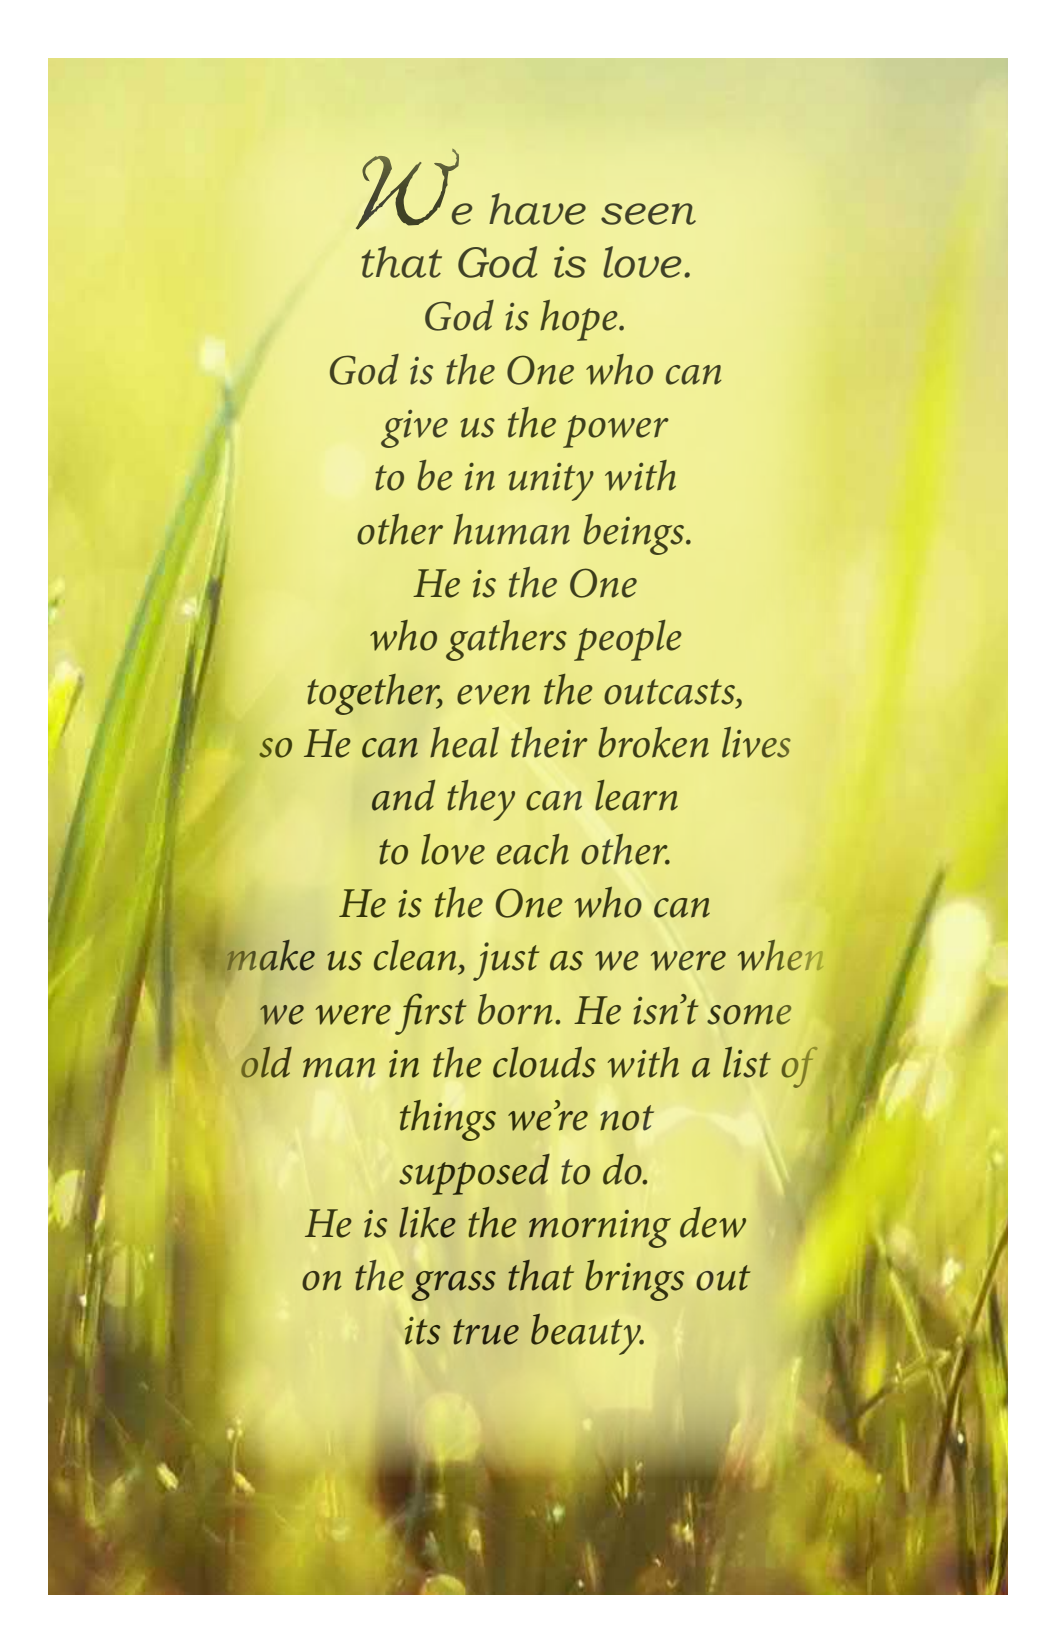

You may have seen us before

We write this freepaper desiring that all who are not satisfied with life would have a place of refuge — all who are hurting and alone and longing for something real.

We have a place for you to belong with real family and friends.

We have seen that God is love.

God is hope.

God is the One who can give us the power to be in unity with other human beings.

*He is the One who gathers people together, even the outcasts,
so He can heal their broken lives and they can learn to love each other.*

He is the One who can make us clean, just as we were when we were first born. He isn't some old man in the clouds with a list of things we're not supposed to do.

He is like the morning dew on the grass that brings out its true beauty.

THERE IS A PEOPLE who woke up this morning with one thing on their minds — to love their Creator with all their heart, mind, and strength, and to love one another just as He loved them. Being just ordinary human beings, we are far from perfect in our love, yet, in hope, we persevere. Our goal? That the kingdom of God would come on earth as it is in heaven, so that love and justice can rule on the earth. Sound impossible? It would be, were it not that the Son of God came to earth to redeem mankind, to set us free from the curse of sin, and to enable us to love. Because we have come to see His worth and our own desperate need, we have surrendered everything in order to follow Him. Our hearts and our homes are open night and day to any who are interested in our life or are weary of their sin and want to know the purpose for which they were created.
